JOHNSON IS SOUND. DECLARE DOCTORS

Heavyweight Champion Is Given Thorough Examination by Physicians.

NOT IN DANGER OF PROSTRATION

Jack Proves That He Knows Thing or Two About Anatomy.

The heavyweight boxing champion of the world returned to Chicago yesterday and underwent a thorough examination by Dr. C. W. K. Briggs, who pronounced the conqueror of Jeffries to be far from the all-in stage.

Johnson was tested in every way. His pulse was taken, his heart action tried, and the reflex nerve action was given a thorough trial, and nothing which would indicate any serious nervous trouble was disclosed.

Johnson showed that he was very wel versed in the working of his own body where the examination started. Dr. Briggs reached for his right hand to feel the pulse and the big boxer asked him to try the left, as he would find the pulse stronger there.

Knows Anatomy.

"I have a good strong pulse that beats around eighty-two and eighty-four," said Jack, "but you will find it stronger in the left wrist because that has been more highly developed. Ever since I was a boy I have done the greater part of my work with my lef side, which has resulted in a sort of abnormal development there."

The doctor first tried the right arm and found the pulse rather weak bu and found the pulse rather weak but regular at eighty-two. He then turned to the left and as obnson had said, the beat was stronger and the count was found to be eighty-four. The other tests followed. The heart action and the heart valves were tried and the various tests of the reflex nerves were applied, after which Dr. Briggs gave the following statement of the champion's condition, which ought to allay the fears of his friends that he is destined to go the same way as Dixon, Jackson, and Gans.

Finds No Weakness.

Physically I have found Johnson to be practically perfect," said Dr. Briggs.
"I can find no organic weakness. His alse is strong and as regular as clock work. The peculiar thing I discovered my examination of him was that the

ATTELL AND MOORE EVENLY MATCHED

NEW YORK, Nov. 30 .- One of the best moons is expected at the Fairmont Ath the club tonight when teatherweight champion Abe Attell hooks up with Pal Moore, of Philadelphia, in a ten-round bout. Moore is now a lightweight and if he gets as good as an even break with the shifty Abe, he will go right after Owen Moran and Ad Woigast, the American lightweight champion. Attell, however, counts on defeating Moore through his speed. He frankly admits that he will not try to trade punches with the Philadelphian. RUMOR OF TRADE

Rob Roy Mackey is here.

Just at a time when the news of the downfall of Battling Nelson would appear as conclusive evidence that they never come back, Washington's famous wrestler leaps into the limelight and announces that he is ready to throw any trio of 150-pound grapplers in Washington for a side bet of $50.

The redoubtable Rob Roy has been keeping in condition cranking automobiles at h's garage on E street, and gathered in enough real money in backing his judgment in feetball that he stands ready to even go further in the matter of challenges and meet any 150-pound man in America.

Pope Praises Baseball

ROME, Italy, Nov. 30 .- The Pope received in audience Mrs. James Dunne and her two daughters, of Chicago. Before they left he gave them silver medals bearing effigies of himself and blessed them and their relatives and friends at home. In the course of his conversation with them the Pope incidentally referred to baseball.

He said he was particularly interested in the American game, and expressed the hope that it would soon be imported into the Latin countries.

Jem Mace, of the Old School of Fighters, Passes Away.

GARROW, England, Nov. 20.—Jem Mace, the veteran prizefighter, died to-

Great Britain, Mace was at one time England's greatest pugilist and made, as he himself termed it, "barrels of money in the ring." Despite this, he died almost pov-of the leading figures in fight circles in

About a year ago he was obliged to apply for a public old-age pension of five shillings a week.

Mace was born at Beeston, Norwich, In April, 1831, and for years before his death enjoyed the reputation of being the oldest living puglist. He prided himself on being the one man that the game had not killed, and attributed his longevity to careful liv-ing and fighting shy of the drink habit.

rifty years ago Mace was in his prime, and had fought at least 500 times. In his younger days Mace bore the reputation of being the hardest hitter in the world. For years he wore the crown of heavy-weight champion of England, before that title was wrested away from him by Charlie Mitchell.

In 1896 Mace came to America and gave a scientific boxing show, meeting Mike Donovan. He entered the ring at the age of eighteen.

Mace began his career as a puglist when he was twenty-four, his first opponent being a formidable English boxer by the name of Slack, whom he put out in the ninth round after 19 minutes of fighting. This was on October 2, 1855, at Milden, and it was sufficient to entitle him to enter at once the London fighting ring. His first opponent there was Billy Thorpe, whom he like-wise defeated in the eightenth round. Mace continued his fights, meeting all leading English puglists, including Posh Price, Bob Travers, Bob Brettle, and Sam Hurst, known as "The Staley-bridge Infant." Hurst went out in the eighth round and Mace was at the planacle of success in English puglism. His next big fight was with Tom King and at its close Mace had the title of champion of England.

He followed this and other English victories in a trip to America where he
